

SUBMERGED OAKS

scuba diving. travel. life.

A family travel and scuba diving blog that follows the adventures of two expats-turned-repats as they travel with world with their children, and scuba dive every chance they get.

About Submerged Oaks

Submerged Oaks was started by Aaron and Meghan Oaks in 2014 when we found out we would be moving to Germany. It started out as a way to keep family and friends back home in Michigan up to date on the adventures we were having. But, our audience grew. It now includes people all over the world, and from many walks of life. We love sharing our experiences with people and helping them find new and unique things to do when they travel. So, what's the meaning behind the blog name? The "Oaks" part comes, obviously, from our last name. The "Submerged" alludes to our love of scuba diving. Our favorite activity to do together is to spend time underwater.

Audience

2000+ Visitors	3000+ Page views	300+ Social Media
71% Female	45% Age 25-34	65% English
47% USA	17% Germany	6% UK

Services Offered

- Sidebar Advertising
- Sponsored Posts
- Reader Giveaways
- Product Reviews
- Guest Posts

Top Blog Posts

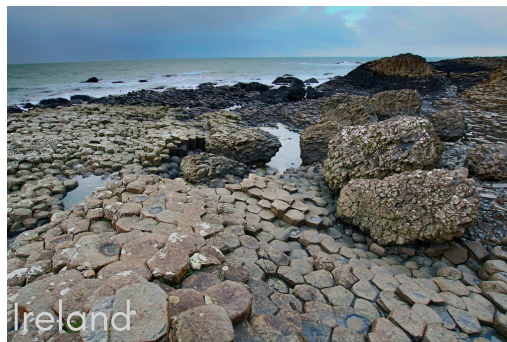

Itinerary: 10 Days in Germany

6 Things to do in Rothenburg ob der Tauber

6 Things to do in Bergen, Norway

Growth Trends

June 2018: 1800
 July 2018: 2100
 August 2018: 2200

Ready? Email us!

submergedoaks@gmail.com

